

NC STATE UNIVERSITY

Ann Savage, North Carolina State University Extension

Ann Savage is a Tourism Extension Associate at NC State University. Savage is responsible for creating and supporting resource and program development to grow prosperous, sustainable tourism opportunities in NC communities. Some of her current projects include working with the North Carolina Division of State Parks, North Carolina Cooperative Extension County Offices, North Carolina Sea Grant, and the North Carolina Oyster Trail. Before coming to NC State in 2020, Savage worked for a destination marketing organization in Central Louisiana, where she was responsible for developing and implementing marketing and public relations initiatives. She also previously Other previous experience includes her M.S. research in agritourism, tourism workforce, and community development at NC State University in the Department of Parks, Recreation & Tourism Management, as well as experience at Louisiana State University in Cooperative Extension developing a variety of trainings and resources for farmers and rural communities across Louisiana.

Learn more about Ann at: <https://cnr.ncsu.edu/directory/ann-savage/>